一、宇宙生命一共同体

自然生命・宇宙帰一・萬法帰一・共同体

生命、私達人間はこの地球大自然の中の種々の生物すべてに生かされ生きる地球生命自然生命の一員であります。その地球を構成する要素であります。あらゆる存在は秩序を支配する法則があり、その中にある生命の存在が真理であります。宇宙のあらゆるものを支配する不変の法則が真理であり、この宇宙の一貫した法の所に神が配するのであります。

この萬法に帰一であり、一切が萬法帰一であります。何れも萬法と言い、萬物とは、これらの根源は一つであるのを指します。その根源の意味は何であるか、それを究めてゆくのが完究であります。根本の所は完究するを意味するものの一つであるが、一切のものは千差萬別であります。何れのもが差萬別であるか。一つとして同じものは大あり小あり、山あり川あり低き草あり高き鳥あり、木天地萬物は現相の上から見ると千差萬別であり、一つとして同じものはない。ただ差萬別の根源をたずねると、その根本・本体を同じくしめる根源を同じくする根源が、みる根本を同じくしめ、然として、

1. The Universe-Life Community

Natural Life · Return to Cosmic Unity · All Laws Return to One · Community

Life — we human beings are members of the Earth's natural life community, sustained by and living among all the diverse creatures within the great nature of this planet. We are elements composing this Earth. There are laws governing the order of all existence, and the presence of life within that order is truth. The immutable laws governing all things in the universe are truth, and it is the divine that presides over this consistent cosmic law.

All things return to this universal law — all returns to the One. What we call "the ten thousand laws" or "the ten thousand things" — these all point to a single source. What is the meaning of that source? To pursue and investigate this is the work of complete inquiry. The fundamental ground is to fully investigate meaning; yet all things exist in infinite variety. What constitutes this infinite variety? Not one thing is the same as another — there is the great and the small, mountains and rivers, low grasses and soaring birds. When we observe the ten thousand things of heaven and earth from the surface of appearances, they are infinitely varied, with no two things alike. Yet when we trace the source of this variety, we find that the root, the essence, is shared — the source is one and the same.

いのちのふるさと福祉保健計画

一、健康

WHO憲章では、健康とは肉体的・精神的・社会的に完全に良好な状態にあることであり、単に疾病がないとか虚弱でないということではない、と定義づけています。

大東亜戦争後、日本の驚異的な経済の一つと定義する。この子寿命は世界的な水準的な目ざましい体位の向上。特徴的に自然と近年は高齢者の問題が浮き上がり、童やも含めての体力、気力が、特に持久力中で日常生活を営むということが問題であると思う。その点からも心身の状態において常に疑問を良好にすると実は別として意欲ある状態であるか、あるかということは向上する問題が必要となる状態に直面している。

健康についての考えも大きな日本農村自立再生百年計画の向上を最終柱として、大総合した、の数えの福祉社会と保健・健康を原動力として、育・保健・健康計画の実現を目標にし、私は増進を常に良好にすることは再生百年計画の考え方と大きな柱と位置づけて、健康・健康計画のある魅力ある郷土の建設に取り組む農村自立再生百年計画にとっても重要であり、この追求する過程にこそ欲しいのちのふるさは、農村自立の。

The Homeland of Life — Welfare and Health Plan

1. Health

The WHO Constitution defines health as a state of complete physical, mental, and social well-being, and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity.

After the Great East Asia War [WWII], Japan achieved one of its remarkable economic miracles. Life expectancy reached world-class levels alongside dramatic improvements in physical development. In recent years, the issue of the elderly has risen prominently, and concerns have emerged about physical strength and vitality — including among children — particularly endurance in daily life. From this perspective, we are facing a situation where we must constantly ask whether people's physical and mental states are maintained in good condition, and whether they live with motivation and aspiration.

Thinking about health must be positioned as a central pillar of the 100-Year Plan for the Self-Reliant Regeneration of Japanese Farming Villages. By making welfare, public health, and wellness the driving force — comprehensively integrated — and by aiming to realize a health plan, we must pursue the construction of an attractive homeland. For the 100-Year Plan, this is of paramount importance, and it is precisely in this pursuit that the homeland of life is found — in the self-reliant farming village.

SET 3: "Mysterious Life" (不思議ないのち)

A sumi-e ink painting of Bodhidharma (Daruma) — the fierce, bearded patriarch of Zen Buddhism — with the character 喝 (KATSU!, the Zen shout of awakening) and the signature 默雷 (Mokurai, "Silent Thunder").

不思議ないのち

私達はそのいのちにつらなる不思議

仏教学者・丘城康四郎翁

私達は宇宙・生命の流れの中に生きている。その思議ないのちの形る宇宙のいのちの流れの中に生かされている。だがそのいのちは目に見えない。人は目に見える物しか見ようとしない。然し、目に見える物だけが見える。ということができるのであろうか。目に見えるものだけで生きさせしめているのであろうか。

現代世界の問題は、人間の不幸さは、ここにあるのではないか。形あるものは目に見えるけれど。その根源と意味が見失われ、現代人は生命の業（いのちのわざ）を見失っている。

私達人間は森を育み、森は命の源であり、いのちのふるさと源でもある。そのいのちのふるさとを守り、しかしてその、のちのふるさとを育てていのちの森を守って、しかしてゆくのが林野行政の根本であり、再生する林野行政であります。

Mysterious Life

We are connected to the mystery of that life

— Buddhist scholar, Venerable Ōki Kōshirō

We live within the flow of the universe and of life. We are kept alive within the flow of the cosmos shaped by this mysterious life. Yet that life is invisible to the eye. People try to see only what is visible. But can we truly say that only what is visible exists? Can life be sustained by the visible alone?

Is this not where the problems of the modern world lie — the unhappiness of humanity? Things with form can be seen, but their source and meaning have been lost sight of. Modern people have lost sight of the workings of life (inochi no waza).

We humans nurture forests, and forests are the wellspring of life — the source of the homeland of life. To protect this homeland of life, to cultivate it, to guard the forests — this is the fundamental purpose of forestry administration, and this is what a regenerative forestry administration must be.

Notes

These three document sets appear to form a unified body of work:

1. 理念 (Philosophy) — The overarching vision and cosmological foundation, grounding village regeneration in universal law and the unity of all life.
2. 保健計画 (Health Plan) — The practical framework for health and healing as core to rural self-reliance.
3. 不思議ないのち (Mysterious Life) — A philosophical/spiritual essay linking Buddhist thought, forests, and the meaning of life to forestry and village regeneration.

The author quotes JFK, cites Buddhist scholar Ōki Kōshirō (丘城康四郎), and uses Zen imagery (Daruma, 喝) to frame what is essentially a grassroots manifesto for the spiritual and physical regeneration of Japanese farming villages through a 100-year horizon — with forests, health, and hitozukuri (人づくり), people-nurturing as its pillars.

The Daruma frontispiece is signed 黙雷 (Mokurai, "Silent Thunder"), likely the author's or a collaborator's Buddhist name/pen name.
